What is the issue you would like the board to address and why? Currently, the sport fishing gear regulations are aligned for the entire drainage by date for the Lower Kenai Peninsula roadside streams, which include the Anchor and Ninilchik rivers and Deep and Stariski creeks. The use of bait in these streams primarily occurs for king and coho salmon and fishing for those species is restricted to the lower sections. Due to progressively later king salmon run timing, the use of bait has been restricted in the first two weeks of July in the lower stream sections, which are closed to king salmon fishing during that time. Currently, anglers may use bait in the upstream stream sections during August when king salmon are actively spawning.
